Claims 19-23 and 25 remain withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected species, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on 6/13/06.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 24 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Guettler in view of Nissan ('526).

Guettler teaches the use of a heater means "connected with (an) injector end region" and the connection is made in such a way to specifically heat the fuel within the injector without heating the injector body. The device is also specifically designed to heat the fuel very rapidly and this process begins anytime low temperatures prevail (such as during starting). Finally, the device is controlled to raise the fuel to just below its boiling point when under pressure so when the pressure is released an explosive atomization" occurs. From the specification taken as a whole this can only mean that the fuel becomes vaporized when the nozzle opens.

Nissan teaches a similar injector that is also mounted in a cylinder head. The heating means is specifically identified as beginning to operate at starting. A conductive path formed by elements 14 and 16 will bring the heat of the engine to the injector tip once the engine warms up.

It would have been obvious to modify the injector heating system of Guettler by beginning to activate the heater at starting and stopping the current after the engine reaches operating temperatures as taught by Nissan because both references taught cylinder mounted injectors with pre-heaters on, or in, the injector tips. The mounting of the injector in the bore taught by Nissan would have been obvious because these details were simply un-shown in Guettler.

Claims 1-18 remain allowed.

Applicant's arguments filed 2/26/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In particular, the applicant has amended his claims to require the examiner to apply the Guettler reference to show new details previously unclaimed. Applicant should note that the language "connected with the injector end region" is very broad in nature and does not require the heater to be on the outside of the injector. As far as the heater not heating the injector body, the applied reference will probably achieve this goal much better than the applicant's device.

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within

TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
